Erin maintains a diverse practice that includes product liability, insurance coverage and defence, municipal and police liability, and class actions.

Whether defending or advising manufacturers and retailers, Erin brings an insightful and business-centric approach to her products practice. With experience in automotive, telecommunications infrastructure, medical devices, and consumer products, Erin has done a deep dive into the regulatory and commercial environments across various sectors. Always prepared to negotiate or litigate, Erin facilitates a resolution that is timely, reflective of client objectives in the broader context, and with regard to reputational risk.

Erin's litigation practice focuses on defence side advocacy on behalf of telecommunications companies, insurance companies, municipalities, police services, and other institutions. With respect to insurance, she provides coverage opinions and advice on policy interpretation related to general liability, property claims, and professional liability. She is also regularly retained by insurers to defend third party liability property and casualty claims. Her municipal law practice centres on police liability, as well as personal injury defence, and infrastructure maintenance. Her class actions experience spans privacy breaches, product liability, and historical abuse claims.

Erin has appeared before the Superior Court of Justice, the Financial Services Commission of Ontario, and the Licence Appeal Tribunal. Erin enjoys volunteering with Pro Bono Ontario and serving on the board of Cardus.
