ARTICLE

2018 Year-End M&A Review and 2019 Trends to Watch For

2018 was another busy year for mergers and acquisitions at BLG. We are proud to have been able to help our clients with several of last year's most significant and interesting transactions across a wide variety of sectors, amounting to an aggregate disclosed value of over CDN$50 billion. For example, we acted as counsel to:

- The Government of Canadain its C$4.5 billion acquisition of the Trans Mountain and Puget Sound Pipelines, and related terminals,
- · CanniMed Therapeutics Inc. in its defence against a C$586 million all stock hostile bid from Aurora Cannabis Inc. and the negotiation of a sweetened friendly C$1.23 billion cash and stock offer.
- The Special Committee of Nevsun Resources Ltd. in its successful defence against an unsolicited C$1.4 billion take-over bid from Lundin Mining Corporation and its subsequent friendly $1.8 billion acquisition by Zijin Mining Group Co., Ltd.
- Pan American Silver Corp. in the US$1.07 billion acquisition of Tahoe Resources Inc.
- Morgan Stanley and M. Klein & Co., financial advisors in the US$18.3 billion merger of Barrick Gold Corp of Canada with Randgold Resources Ltd.
- Mittleman Brothers in the C$2.35 billion acquisition of the Aeroplan Loyalty Business by the Air Canada-led consortium including The Toronto-Dominion Bank, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Visa Canada Corporation and Aimia Inc. Sumitomo Corporation in its US$1.68 billion joint venture with Michelin North America Inc.
- Cuda Energy Inc. in its strategic combination with Junex Inc. by way of plan of arrangement and concurrent acquisition of U.S. oil and
- COSCO Shipping Holdings Co. Ltd. and Orient Overseas International Ltd. as competition counsel in COSCO's US$6.3 billion acquisition
- Alterra Power Corp. in its C$1.1 billion acquisition by Innergex Renewable Energy Inc.
 MD Financial Group of companies in their acquisition by Scotiabank from the Canadian Medical Association for C$2.585 billion
- First Coin Capital Corp. in the merger with Galaxy Digital and Bradmer Pharmaceuticals Inc. and concurrent C$305 million subscription receipt offering

Trends to Watch for in 2019

As 2019 commences, it is difficult to tell what lies ahead for M&A in the coming year, particularly as M&A activity seems to have fallen off at the end of the year in the U.S. and around the world to levels not seen for some time, despite a strong year overall in 2018. What factors are likely to influence M&A activity in 2019?

After years of ultra-low interest rates, 2018 saw the Bank of Canada and the Federal Reserve in the U.S. begin to raise their benchmark rates, The benchmark rate in Canada has increased to 1.75 per cent and, after four hikes in 2018, the Federal Reserve's benchmark rate has now hit a range of 2.25 per cent to 2.5 per cent. While there were expectations we would see further increases in 2019, expectations have been tempered somewhat as the market turbulence at the end of 2018 seemed to indicate some pessimism about where interest rates and the overall economy in both Canada and the U.S. were headed in 2019

Despite these confusing signals, interest rates remain low by historical standards and it may only be a matter of time before the market adjusts. After all, while there is more uncertainty around the general direction of the world economy, employment remains and is expected to continue at high levels in Canada and the U.S., and the drop in valuations may make acquisitions more attractive. The result may be that what we are seeing now is just a pause while market participants take stock of where things are, to be followed by renewed activity as the market adjusts. Commentators have also suggested that recent significant drops in the market, triggered in part by rising interest rates, may make some public companies more attractive as targets to cash-rich private equity funds looking for bargains

Shareholder Activism and Take-Overs

Last year we predicted that the trend toward increased shareholder activism would continue, and we were correct. We believe this trend will continue into 2019, particularly since the general fall in the equity markets has left most companies with lower valuations and a potentially grumpier shareholder base. Even with continued high levels of activity, it is likely going to be more difficult for dissidents to be successful as companies are paying more attention to their shareholder base and preparing themselves in case they become targets. Whether this will result in more contested public activist campaigns, or more private settlements with activists achieving fewer of their demands, remains to be

As Canada completes its second year under the new take-over bid regime, it seems clear that hostile take-over bids have become less common, although the trend had been downward over the past 10 years or so in any event. Nevertheless, hostile bids have not gone away completely under the new rules. While the longer time periods have made hostile bids less interesting to watch, we have witnessed a number of them in 2018, including hostile bids in the oil patch which have historically been quite rare

Politics

While it is obvious that politics can affect economic activity and M&A, it remains something that should be kept in mind for 2019 when there are so many significant political cards in play. Canada is caught in the cross-fire of the U.S./China conflict over trade, and not just because of the arrest by Canadian authorities of the CFO of Huawei at the request of the U.S. While it had seemed Canada might benefit by selling, for example, agricultural products to China which China was no longer buying from the U.S., this now seems less likely. Domestically, the oil patch continues to suffer from low oil prices and the lack of pipelines to ocean ports. Whether steps can be taken to add pipeline capacity remains one of the most critical, not to mention existential, issues facing the current federal government. Other important matters to address in the coming months include ratification of the new Canada-U.S.-Mexico trade agreement, the hoped-for end to U.S. aluminum and steel tariffs, a federal election in the fall of 2019, the effects of a new Democrat-controlled House of Representatives in the U.S., and the fate of Brexit. All of these elements create uncertainty, which adds to the difficulty in making M&A decisions and may serve to mute M&A activity in

BLG's M&A Building Blocks

In 2018, BLG continued to add to our M&A Building Blocks series, a client resource explaining the fundamentals of M&A and outlining the key elements of an M&A deal, from start to finish, with more to come in 2019. The instalments released to date are:

- Introduction to the Deal
- Confidentiality Agreements and Letters of Intent
- Duties of the Board or Special Committee
- · Basic Deal Structure
- Dealing with Public Disclosure
 Negotiating Representations, Warranties & Material Adverse Change/Effect Clauses

For further information about M&A Building Blocks team and to access our guide to Mergers and Acquisitions in Canada, our M&A Building Blocks series and further bulletins, visit blg.com/ma.

Related Contacts & Expertise

Frank Callaghan
Senior Counsel

- Toronto
- ▼ FCallaghan@blg.com
- 416.367.6014

Kent Kufeldt

Partner and National Business Leader, Securities & Capital Markets

- Vancouver
- KKufeldt@blg.com
- 604.640.4195

Related Expertise

Energy - Oil & Gas

International

United States

Mergers & Acquisitions