Sindy is the National Director, Talent Development at Borden Ladner Gervais LLP. She leads the Firm's Professional Excellence Program – a forward-looking national initiative designed to equip BLG professionals with the business, legal, and leadership skills required to thrive in the law firm of the future.

Since joining BLG, she has also overseen the Firm's recruitment strategies and programs, ensuring that the next generation of legal talent is prepared to succeed in a rapidly evolving landscape.

With more than twenty years of experience as a lawyer, Sindy combines deep knowledge of the legal industry with a distinctive perspective on talent, performance, and growth. Before joining BLG, she served as Director, Students, Associates & Professional Development for the Montréal office of another large national law firm. Earlier in her career, she practised in labour and employment law, a role that grounded her career in the intersection of people, business, and law.

Sindy also holds certifications in neuroscience and performance psychology from the Wharton School and the Barça Innovation Hub. Drawing on this expertise, she frequently speaks and advises on professional excellence, high performance, resilience, and the future of legal talent.
