

False Allegations of Cause Prove Costly for Employer

May 01, 2016

Employers who choose to raise unfounded allegations of just cause for strategic reasons, to avoid severance costs or to use such allegations as leverage to reduce their severance obligations, ought to beware. The end result could be more costly. This clear message was sent to an Ontario employer, Altus Group Limited ("Altus"), in a recent Ontario Superior Court decision.¹

Alan Gordon sold the assets of his business to Altus in November 2008. Some of the sale proceeds were linked to the performance of the business after closing, with the provision of an adjustment to the purchase price by February 2010 based on the company's performance. Mr. Gordon was hired to continue as an employee of Altus post-sale under a written fixed term employment agreement. The agreement included an express termination provision. Conflict developed between Gordon and Altus as the parties approached the purchase price adjustment date, and Mr. Gordon gave notice to activate the arbitration clause in the purchase agreement to resolve the dispute.

In March 2010, Altus terminated Mr. Gordon's employment for cause. Amongst its allegations were that he had spoken to senior management in a derogatory manner, swore often in the workplace, and was generally unpleasant to work with. In addition, Altus alleged and that Mr. Gordon had failed to disclose lending money to a company with which Altus was doing business, placing him in a conflict of interest. Altus also alleged that Mr. Gordon had hired and continued to employ an individual who had been charged with fraud.

However, Justice Glass concluded there was little merit in the employer's allegations, and that once Mr. Gordon gave notice to arbitrate the purchase price adjustment, Altus wanted to end the employment contract without paying him severance. "In other words, they decided to be cheap and then conjured up a cause for firing in order to save money."² Justice Glass concluded that Altus' actions were outrageous and warranted punitive damages in the amount of $100,000. In arriving at the quantum, the court stated, "that sum of money notes the harsh treatment of Alan Gordon over an extended period of time as a means of sanctioning Altus for its terrible conduct."³

Employers should be careful to allege cause only where there is a foundation for such allegations. Otherwise, courts may sanction the employer's conduct. While exemplary damages in employment cases used to be few and far between, the Altus decision (among others) shows that courts will not shy away from awarding them against an employer whose conduct is deserving of punishment.

1 Gordon v. Altus Group Limited, 2015 ONSC 5663.

2 Supra, at para 25.

3 Supras, at para 42.

By

Jennifer M. Fantini

BLG | Canada's Law Firm

As the largest, truly full-service Canadian law firm, Borden Ladner Gervais LLP (BLG) delivers practical legal advice for domestic and international clients across more practices and industries than any Canadian firm. With over 725 lawyers, intellectual property agents and other professionals, BLG serves the legal needs of businesses and institutions across Canada and beyond – from M&A and capital markets, to disputes, financing, and trademark & patent registration.

blg.com

BLG Offices

Calgary

Centennial Place, East Tower
520 3rd Avenue S.W.
Calgary, AB, Canada
T2P 0R3

T 403.232.9500
F 403.266.1395

Ottawa

World Exchange Plaza
100 Queen Street
Ottawa, ON, Canada
K1P 1J9

T 613.237.5160
F 613.230.8842

Vancouver

1200 Waterfront Centre
200 Burrard Street
Vancouver, BC, Canada
V7X 1T2

T 604.687.5744
F 604.687.1415

Montréal

1000 De La Gauchetière Street West
Suite 900
Montréal, QC, Canada
H3B 5H4

T 514.954.2555
F 514.879.9015

Toronto

Bay Adelaide Centre, East Tower
22 Adelaide Street West
Toronto, ON, Canada
M5H 4E3

T 416.367.6000
F 416.367.6749

The information contained herein is of a general nature and is not intended to constitute legal advice, a complete statement of the law, or an opinion on any subject. No one should act upon it or refrain from acting without a thorough examination of the law after the facts of a specific situation are considered. You are urged to consult your legal adviser in cases of specific questions or concerns. BLG does not warrant or guarantee the accuracy, currency or completeness of this publication. No part of this publication may be reproduced without prior written permission of Borden Ladner Gervais LLP. If this publication was sent to you by BLG and you do not wish to receive further publications from BLG, you may ask to remove your contact information from our mailing lists by emailing unsubscribe@blg.com or manage your subscription preferences at blg.com/MyPreferences. If you feel you have received this message in error please contact communications@blg.com. BLG's privacy policy for publications may be found at blg.com/en/privacy.

© 2025 Borden Ladner Gervais LLP. Borden Ladner Gervais LLP is an Ontario Limited Liability Partnership.