Kathryn practices in intellectual property law, with a focus on trademark prosecution, patent prosecution and IP portfolio management. She assists brand owners, ranging from businesses, not-for-profits and public agencies, in building a targeted brand strategy and in the clearance of their trademark rights in Canada.

Kathryn has a technical background in chemical engineering and has experience in drafting and prosecuting patent applications in the fields of mechanical inventions, energy, food and agriculture, mining and metallurgy, industrial processes, and life sciences.

Kathryn's practice also includes conducting and providing IP due diligence and analysis with respect to corporate and financial transactions.
