Bobby Solhi is a Canadian tax lawyer. Bobby has a national indirect/commodity tax practice where he provides expertise focused on goods and services tax and harmonized sales tax (GST/HST), provincial sales taxes, excise tax and customs duty, carbon charge, tobacco taxes, and various industry-specific taxes. He has significant experience advising organizations in all sectors including real property, technology, energy, retail, logistics, travel, and financial institutions. He also maintains a private client practice which includes company formation, tax-driven reorganizations and tax-efficient planning for owners

In addition to his tax advisory practice, Bobby is an experienced tax litigator representing clients before the Canadian tax authorities and the Courts.

Prior to private practice, Bobby was a Legislation Design Specialist at the Ontario Ministry of Finance where he helped shape tax policy and law including the introduction of the Harmonized Sales Tax.

Bobby is a frequent presenter on tax law matters before accounting, financial, and industry organizations. He is a featured Canadian tax law expert for LexisNexis' Legal Practice Advisor where he has published tax modules for lawyers involved in corporate and commercial transactions.
