Christine (Chris) Muir's practice encompasses complex commercial litigation and high-profile administrative matters.

She specializes in complex litigation, including contract disputes, and public and appellate law. She also has experience advising on and managing defamation matters.

Chris acts as counsel for both plaintiffs and defendants. She represents clients ranging from large corporations and institutions to small business owners and professionals in sectors including health, finance, construction and education.

She has appeared as counsel before all levels of courts in Ontario and the Federal Court of Canada, and appears before administrative tribunals, including as Presenting Counsel before the Ontario Judicial Council.

Chris is committed to mentoring young lawyers and law students both within the firm and in the larger Toronto legal community. She is frequently asked to speak at legal conferences and industry events.

From 2009-2010, Chris served as a law clerk to the Chief Justice of Ontario, the Honourable Warren Winkler, and to Justices James MacPherson and David Watt of the Court of Appeal for Ontario.
