St phanie Gascon practices in Commercial Litigation. She was admitted to the Barreau du Qu bec in 2018, after having completed her studies in civil law and common law at the University of Ottawa.

During her law studies, St phanie was a member of the Student Committee on Intellectual Property and represented the University of Ottawa in the Pierre-Basile-Mignault Moot Court competition. She also participated in a student exchange program with the University of Geneva and worked in a Swiss law firm, where she practiced in private international law and arbitration. That experience enabled her to secure a summer job with the International Labour Organization.

After articling at BLG, St phanie earned an LL.M. degree at the prestigious Columbia University, where she studied, among other things, international law, international arbitration, environmental law and health law. She also worked at the International Telecommunication Union, where she specialized in artificial intelligence.
