Amanda' practice focuses on complex commercial litigation, international dispute resolution, and appellate advocacy. She takes a strategic and practical approach to high-stakes disputes, advising and representing clients across the aerospace, financial services, technology, telecommunications, and entertainment sectors. She has appeared before all levels of court in Canada, including the Supreme Court of Canada on multiple occasions, the Federal Court of Appeal, and the Québec Court of Appeal. She represents clients in arbitrations under a broad range of institutional and ad hoc rules, including ICC, ICDR, UNCITRAL, and ADRIC rules.

Amanda has litigated complex cases in diverse areas, including contractual disputes; competition and anti-trust disputes; shareholder disputes; arbitration-related litigation; consumer class actions; environmental litigation; and regulatory and administrative law disputes. She has extensive experience in aerospace disputes, having advised aircraft manufacturers and suppliers from Canada, the United States, Europe and Asia on dozens of complex commercial disputes, and represented clients in significant arbitration and court proceedings.

Amanda has in-depth experience in international and transnational disputes, with particular knowledge in jurisdictional challenges, conflict-of-laws issues, cross-border discovery, and the recognition and enforcement of foreign judgments and arbitral awards. She regularly acts for and against foreign states and state-owned entities, advising on matters involving state immunity and complex multi-jurisdictional enforcement strategies. Her international practice also includes matters involving investment treaty arbitration, public international law, business and human rights, and ESG. In 2025, she and her team received a Benchmark Litigation Impact Case Award for their work representing investors of Devas Multimedia Private Ltd. in recognition and enforcement proceedings relating to a US$110 million arbitral award against the Republic of India.

Amanda regularly assists clients in locating, tracing, preserving, and recovering assets across jurisdictions in complex enforcement and fraud matters. She develops and executes recovery strategies that are both legally sound and commercially effective, and regularly advises and represents clients in applications for interim and pre-judgment relief, including Mareva injunctions, seizures before judgment, and Norwich orders.

Amanda also acts in arbitration-related litigation, including challenges to the validity and jurisdiction of arbitration agreements, annulment proceedings, and motions to refer disputes to arbitration. She has been retained as an expert on Québec law before an international tribunal.

In addition, Amanda maintains a substantial public law practice, representing clients in constitutional and administrative law matters, including in judicial review proceedings, and challenges to legislation, regulations, and government action.

After earning a dual J.D./LL.B. (Civil Law) from Osgoode Hall Law School and the Université de Montréal, Amanda served as a law clerk to the Honourable Nicole Duval Hesler, then Chief Justice of Québec, and the Honourable Guy Cournoyer at the Québec Court of Appeal. She is fluent in French, English and Arabic.
