Jordan's practice focuses on energy and utilities regulation. He advises and represents proponents and investors in energy infrastructure projects, including renewable energy and energy storage projects, in respect of facility approvals, regulatory compliance, transactional due diligence and environmental matters. He also represents utility clients in tariff applications and related proceedings involving cost of service and performance-based rates, cost of capital, rate design, energy procurement, and other matters.

Jordan brings a depth of experience in all facets of the energy industry in Alberta and at the federal level. He has represented clients before energy regulators in Alberta, British Columbia and Ontario and before the courts in Alberta and British Columbia and the Supreme Court of Canada.
