Hanna is an articling student focusing on litigation at BLG's Toronto office.

As a law student, Hanna led the McGill Law Journal's Podcast Committee and was art director for the Faculty of Law's weekly news magazine. She worked at the Competition Bureau and interned at the Centre for Law and Democracy as part of McGill's International Human Rights Internship Program. Prior to her legal studies Hanna worked at PBS' flagship station in New York City, WNET. She oversaw the digital presence of both local and national on-air programs, many of which she grew up watching herself.

Hanna chose to work at BLG because of the firm's diverse practice areas and its commitment to mentoring and training students.

Hanna enjoys traveling, taking care of her many houseplants, and finding people to take care of her houseplants when she travels.
